[BREAKING] #Chef_Luo says Westbay sells the most expensive pre-made food# Chef Luo went live tonight and clarified: "I'm not against pre-made meals. The public anger is because Westbay charges the highest prices among all pre-made food sellers — a single steamed bun for ¥21." #Consumer_Rights #Pre-made_Meal_Act selected agent	@User_FJ_*21	Westbay's PR is painful to watch — they deleted the apology letter and reposted it with just one punctuation change. Where's the sincerity? #Pre-made_Honesty	😡 Anger 0.8

	@SunshineRunner	Pre-made food itself isn't the enemy. The problem is selling frozen meals at fresh-cooked prices without disclosure. Hopefully regulation will fix this.	😐 Neutral 0.2
	@Calm_Observer	Actually the law already says central-kitchen prep ≠ pre-made food. Both sides are talking past each other. We need clearer standards, not a social media war.	😐 Neutral 0.3
	@FoodyMao_C	Chef Luo, keep going! Hope the government passes the labeling law soon so consumers can actually make informed choices.	😊 Happy 0.3

@Foodie_Critic: An article questions whether Chef Luo's public attack on Westbay is fair. Worth reading.

Chef Luo's move actually helps consumers know their rights! Every restaurant should disclose whether they use pre-made components. This is a transparency issue, not a personal grudge.

This isn't a misunderstanding — they got caught. Frozen broccoli with a 2-year shelf life sold to families with kids? Honestly, using pre-made food isn't shameful. What IS shameful is charging fresh-cooked prices while reheating frozen ingredients. Just label it "pre-made." At least that would be honest. #Pre-made_Honesty
